

JOE SMITH, MD, MBA

Statement of Interest

As we see increased consolidation of healthcare organizations and the development of the value equation with the interaction of costs and quality metrics, determining payment for services, AAAHC will need to develop a clear strategy for organic and/or inorganic growth. AAAHC has a critical role in setting standards, maintaining quality and monitoring compliance. The AAAHC board of directors needs to think strategically about current and future initiatives. My MBA focused on business strategy at various levels, internationally, nationally, regionally and individually. The AAAHC governance change began with the appointment of the original Governance Task Force during my year as Board Chair. I understand AAAHC from a volunteer surveyor to Board Chair.

SUSAN DOE, MD

Statement of Interest

In a rapidly shifting healthcare landscape, AAAHC must seek new business models and sources of revenue, while remaining true to its core values and historical mission. As an owner of two AAACH-accredited endoscopy centers, I represent a primary constituency for our organization and am very familiar with the needs of our customers. My leadership activities in organized medicine provide additional skills and experience which will be valuable to AAAHC.

TOM CHASE, RN

Statement of Interest

Having served on the Governing Council for the past 6 years, I would like to continue serving on the AAAHC Board. As a surveyor for the past 15 years and having my own AAAHC certified surgery center, I believe that I can offer a unique perspective to the Board. I have a passionate commitment to AAAHC and despite a busy solo practice, performed 11 surveys in 2017. I believe an important issue facing AAAHC is to maintain its position as the leader in accreditation.
